PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

THE publication of the Supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary in November 1933 makes important additions to the material which it is the aim of this book, as a dictionary of the living language, to present. This new edition is distinguished partly by changes in the text, but chiefly by supplementary articles in extensive Addenda, the scope of which is explained on p. 1446. Mr H. W. Fowler entrusted me with the preparation of this edition in February 1933, and until his death on the 26th December of that year I had the privilege of his guidance.

H. G. LE M., 1934.

From the PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

WHEN we began, more than twenty years ago, the work that took shape as The Concise Oxford Dictionary, we were plunging into the sea of lexicography without having been first taught to swim. But lexicography for us was fortunately of the minor or dependent kind; and, fortunately also, the time was one at which the major or firsthand kind was reaching greater excellence than ever before, and the Oxford English Dictionary, four-fifths completed, already provided popularizers with unlimited material.

The object we set before us, hinted at by the word current on our title-page, was to present as vivid a picture as the small dictionary could be made to give of the English that was being spoken and written at the time. The vividness was to be secured by allotting space to words more nearly in proportion to the frequency and variety of their use, and consequently to their practical value, than had been the custom; and further by an unprecedented abundance of illustrative quotation; define, and your reader gets a silhouette; illustrate, and he has it 'in the round'. That at least was our belief; and we hailed as confirmation of it one or two letters from persons unknown congratulating us on having 'produced a live dictionary', or 'treating English at last as a living language'.

A living language, however, does not remain unchanged through twenty years and a great war; our picture has needed, and received, a good deal of retouching before being again exhibited in public.

The original preface follows, with no change except the interpolation, in square brackets, of some necessary comments.

H. W. F., 1929.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A dictionary-maker, unless he is a monster of omniscience, must deal with a great many matters of which he has no first hand knowledge. That he has been guilty of errors and omissions in some of these he will learn soon after publication, sometimes with gratitude to his enlightener, sometimes otherwise. The first letter we received after C.O.D. appeared was a demand for repayment of the book's cost, on the ground that it failed to give gal(l)iot, to settle the spelling of which it had been bought. Even for that announcement of an omission I am now grateful, as affording a good illustration of the less friendly form of correction, and reminding me to assure the public that to one revising for a new edition no correction is (ultimately) unwelcome; all is grist that comes to his mill. At the other end of the scale is the friend, known to me only by correspondence, who for years sent me fortnightly packets of foolscap devoted to perfecting a still contingent second edition—all this for love of the language not as a philological playground, but as the medium of exchange and bond of union among the English-speakers of the world. Castigavit et emendavit Byron F. Caws might have stood with justice at the foot of our title-page.

Other helpers have been many, some with systematic lists, others with a few isolated but valuable points; to all those in the list below I would fain offer—what some of them are no longer living to receive—my heartiest thanks:

Leslie J. Berlin Esq.; Major B. F. Caws; Dr R. W. Chapman; Mr S. K. N. Chaudhuri; *Sir Arthur Church K.C.V.O.; Rev. G. P. Ford; H. Gilbert-Carter Esq.; *Prof. Marcus Hartog; the Very Reverend Dr J. H. Hertz; Rev. J. Clare Hudson; Rev. F. E. Hutchinson; Lindsay Johnson M.D., F.R.S.; Rev. D. Evans Jones; Major C. V. N. Lyne; D. C. Macgregor Esq.; F. Morland Esq.; C. O. PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION¹

THE steady advance towards completion of the great Oxford English Dictionary has made it possible for the Delegates of the Clarendon Press to authorize the preparation and issue of this book, which in its own province and on its own scale uses the materials and follows the methods by which the Oxford editors have revolutionized lexicography. The book is designed as a dictionary, and not as an encyclopaedia ; that is, the uses of words and phrases as such are its subject matter, and it is concerned with giving information about the things for which those words and phrases stand only so far as correct use of the words depends upon knowledge of the things. The degree of this dependence varies greatly with the kind of word treated, the difference between cyclopaedic and dictionary treatment varies with it, and the line of distinction is accordingly a fluctuating and dubious one. It is to the endeavour to discern and keep to this line that we attribute whatever peculiarities we are conscious of in this dictionary as compared with others of the same size. One of these peculiarities is the large amount of space given to the common words that no one goes through the day without using scores or hundreds of times, often disposed of in a line or two on the ground that they are plain and simple and that every one knows all about them by the light of nature, but in fact entangled with other words in so many alliances and antipathies during their perpetual knocking about the world that the idiomatic use of them is far from easy ; chief among such words are the prepositions, the conjunctions, the pronouns, and such ' simple ' nouns and verbs as hand and way, go and put. Another peculiarity is the use, copious for so small a dictionary, of illustrative sentences as a necessary supplement to definition when a word has different senses between which the distinction is fine, or when a definition is obscure and unconvincing until exemplified ; these sentences often are, but still more often are not, quotations from standard authors ; they are meant to establish the sense of the definition by appeal not to external authority, but to the reader's own consciousness, and therefore their source, even when authoritative, is not named. A third and a fourth peculiarity are the direct results of the preceding ones ; if common words are to be treated at length, and their uses to be copiously illustrated, space must be saved both by the curtest possible treatment of all that are either uncommon or fitter for the encyclopaedia than the dictionary, and by the severest economy of expression—amounting to the adoption of telegraphese—that readers can be expected to put up with.

In attaching this great importance to illustration, by the need of which the relative length of articles, and our manner of expressing ourselves on every page, are governed, we are merely acting, with the exaggeration imposed on us by our limited space, upon the principles of the O.E.D. That may be said to be the first dictionary for which the ideal procedure has been possible, that is, the approaching of each article with an open mind and a collection of examples large enough to be exhaustive, and the extraction from these of classified senses—the first dictionary, to put it another way, in which quotations have served not merely to adorn or convince, but as the indispensable raw material. This procedure—first the collection of sentences from all possible sources as raw material, and then the independent classification—we have often followed even in that part of our book (A–R) in which the O.E.D., with senses already classified and definitions provided, was before us, treating its articles rather as quarries to be drawn upon than as structures to be reproduced in little; and in the later part (S–Z), where we had no longer the O.E.D. to depend upon, it has been our practice still more often; for many of the more difficult (i. e. especially the common and ‘simple’) words, we have collected the quotations given in the best modern dictionaries (the Imperial, the Century, the Standard, Cassell’s Encyclopaedic, Webster, &c.), added to these what we could get either from other external sources or from our own heads, and then framed our articles, often without reference to the arrangement that we found in any of our authorities. Proceeding in this manner, it was almost inevitable that we should be very much alive to the inadequacy of mere definition and the need of constant illustration. That our examples have some general tendency to the colloquial, and include many usages for which room has not been found in dictionaries many times as large as this, is in harmony with our design of on the one hand restricting ourselves for the most part to current English, and on the other hand omitting nothing to which that description may fairly be applied.

VOCABULARY

The words, or senses of words, given are meant to be such only as are current; ‘current’, however, is an elastic term; we might, but we do not, stretch it to include all words and senses used by Shakspeare or in the Bible, on the ground that the whole of Shakspeare and the whole of the Bible are still commonly read; thus the archaic senses of addition (title), buxom (pliant), owe (own), sad (serious), sort (suit), and the archaic words shend (scold), wood (mad), familiar as they are to readers of Elizabethan literature, are not given. We do stretch it to include many words and senses that are fossilized, having in themselves no life or capacity for further development, but kept extant by being enshrined in perhaps a single proverb or phrase that is still in use ; of this sort are coil (confusion), preserved by 'shuffled off this mortal coil', and scotch (wound), preserved by 'we have scotched the snake, not killed it'.

Again, of the many thousands of old or new scientific and technical terms that have a limited currency some are carried by accident into the main stream of the language and become known temporarily or permanently, vaguely or precisely, to all ordinarily well-informed members of the modern newspaper-reading public. For the purposes of a dictionary that is not to be bulky and yet is to give a fuller treatment than is usual in dictionaries of its size to the undoubtedly current words forming the staple of the language, selection among these intruders is a difficult but very necessary task. The most that can be hoped for is that every one conversant with any special vocabulary may consider us, though sadly deficient on his subject, fairly copious on others ; the meaning of many learned words that have been omitted as having no pretence to general currency may easily be gathered by reference first to the stem, which is often the subject of an article, or to another word of which the stem is clearly the same, and secondly to the suffix.

In another class of words and senses the test of currency has led us to diverge in the opposite direction from the practice usual in dictionaries of this size ; if we give fewer scientific and technical terms, we admit colloquial, facetious, slang, and vulgar expressions with freedom, merely attaching a cautionary label ; when a well-established usage of this kind is omitted, it is not because we consider it beneath the dignity of lexicography to record it, but because, not being recorded in the dictionaries from which our word-list is necessarily compiled, it has escaped our notice ; we have not, however, consulted slang dictionaries nor made any attempt at completeness in this respect.

SPELLING

The spelling adopted is for the most part, but not invariably, that of the O.E.D. For instance, the verbs that contain the suffix -ize (which see), and their derivatives in -ization &c., are all given without the alternative forms in -ise &c., although these are still the commoner in British (as opposed to American) printing ; but such generally established spellings as judgment, rhyme, axe, have not been excluded in favour of the judgement, rime, ax, preferred by the O.E.D., but are retained at least as alternatives having the right to exist. [I have now found salvation, so far as preference for judgement, abridgement, &c., over the clipped forms is concerned. The simple rule that a mute e is dropped before suffixes beginning with a vowel, but not before suffixes beginning with a consonant, is so nearly universal, and so useful, that it should surely prevail in cases where usage still allows any possibility of choosing the right. The question is discussed in Modern English Usage, article Mute E.] In dealing with verbs such as level, rivet, bias, whose parts and derivatives are variously spelt, the final consonant being often doubled with no phonetic or other significance, we have as far as possible fallen in with the present tendency, which is to drop the useless letter, but stopped short of recognizing forms that at present strike every reader as Americanisms; thus we write riveted, riveter, but not traveling, traveler. On another point of varying usage—the insertion of a mute e in derivatives in -able, -age, -ish, &c., to indicate the ‘long’ sound of the stem vowel (likable or likeable, milage or mileage, latish or lateish)—we have thought ourselves justified in taking a bolder line, and have consistently omitted the -e; it is against all analogy (or why not smileing, Romeish, doteage, tidial, indescribeable, desireable, exciteable?), it is used chiefly in words not familiar or important enough to have their form respected as established, it obscures the different and more valuable use by which a soft g or c is indicated as in manageable and serviceable, and it tempts bad spellers to such monstrosities as unpalateable, loveable, and moveable. In words of the type ardour, colour, favour, where the O.E.D. recognizes both -our and -or, we have excluded the latter as being (except in particular words like horror and torpor, in which it is usually the only form) entirely non-British. Words in which -y- has intruded itself without completely dispossessing a more correct -i-, as sylvan, tyro, tyre, we have given with the -i- form either alone or placed first. In stating the plural of words in -o, we have found it impossible to draw any satisfactory line between the words that prefer -os and those that prefer -oes; it may perhaps be laid down that on the one hand words of which the plural is very commonly used, as potato, have almost invariably -oes, and on the other hand words still felt to be foreign or of abnormal form, as soprano, chromo for chromolithograph, have almost invariably -os; of many other words it may be said with confidence that they use one form only (cf. punctilios, noes); but the majority fluctuate, and we have not seen our way to doing otherwise. We have also to admit that after trying hard at an early stage to arrive at some principle that should teach us when to separate, when to hyphen, and when to unite the parts of compound words, we had to abandon the attempt as hopeless, and welter in the prevailing chaos. [On this question, too, another simple rule seems capable of converting the chaos referred to in the text into something like order, and thousands of compounds have in this edition been corrected into conformity with it. It is applicable to the countless compounds, far outnumbering all others, in which the second element is a noun, and the first a word, whether an actual adjective or not, whose relation to that noun is adjectival (e.g., tipsy cake and plum cake, however written, are both compounds, but one has an adjective, the other a noun used adjectivally, preceding the noun). The simple rule is that in such compounds the legitimacy of hyphening depends solely on pronunciation: it must only be done if the two parts are said with a single (or with one clearly predominant) stress, and that falls on the first. This rule, excluding head-master, in which the stress is certainly not on head, gives the easier choice between head master and headmaster (either of which will serve); or, excluding water-ouzel as having two equal stresses, leaves no doubt that water ouzel is the right choice. Ruthless application of this rule results in the disappearance of at least a score of hyphens for every one that for some other reason has been newly inserted; and I have some hope that it will be accepted as both reasonable and useful, though I admit that hyphen-lovers will sometimes feel themselves defrauded. A consequence of this reformed hyphening is that the presence of a hyphen in such a compound assures the reader that the word-stress falls on the first part. Even to an Englishman that assurance is sometimes welcome, and to foreigners it is, as letters from them have convinced me, of great importance.]

PRONUNCIATION

When the pronunciation of a word is not sufficiently determined by the placing of the stress-mark or by vowel quantities, further information follows in round brackets. The phonetic values of the letters employed in these, and the use of the stress-mark, are explained on the page facing the letter A.

Derivatives are to be understood, unless the contrary is indicated, as following the pronunciation of the main word under which they are given or to which they are referred in the etymological note.

The pronunciation of many words is omitted on the assumption that the reader is already familiar with the normal values of some letters and combinations. The hard sounds of th and s, and the sounds of c (s) and g (j) before i, e, and y, are recorded only for special purposes; a vowel that is short before two consonants or a single final consonant, or long before a single consonant followed by e mute, is not usually marked; and the pronunciation of the suffix -ation (-āshn) and of the a in path &c. (-ah-, -ă-) is not given.

To some suffixes no less familiar than -ation pronunciation is added in view of certain ignorant or pedantic tendencies. The pleasant fiction that cottage is pronounced kōtāj, though still prevalent in dictionaries, has perhaps never deceived any one; but we have all heard furniture (-tūr), knowledge (nō-), and often (-t-). Against these and other results of the undue influence of spelling warnings are freely given.

In the choice or rejection of alternative pronunciations the O.E.D. has always been consulted, but is not always followed.

ORDER OF SENSES

From the order in which the senses of a word are here given no inference must be drawn as to their historical or other relations, the arrangement being freely varied according to the requirements or possibilities of the particular word. Sense-development cannot always be convincingly presented without abundant quotation from authorities, and the historical order is further precluded by the uniform omission of obsolete senses. Occasionally, when a rare but still current sense throws light on the commoner senses that follow or forms the connecting link with the etymology, it has been placed at the beginning; but more commonly the order adopted has been that of logical connexion or of comparative familiarity or importance.

ETYMOLOGY

Etymology is given in square brackets at the end of each article.

Words of Teutonic origin are illustrated by all or some of the forms found in cognate languages. With words that have passed through several languages on their way to English, the forms taken in successive languages are recorded in full, with the following exceptions. (1) When OF or the like at the beginning of the etymology is not followed by the old French form written in full, it is because the latter is identical in spelling with the English or differs from it only in some unimportant detail specified in brackets. (2) The Latin form of a Greek word is usually omitted, and is to be inferred according to the rules of transliteration given below. Thus (under pleonasm) 'f. L f. Gk pleonasmos' is to be read 'f. L pleonasmus f. Gk pleonasmos'. A similar omission of a word in any other language implies absolute identity of form.

Greek words are written with the corresponding English letters (φ, χ, ψ, ρ, ρ̂, = ph, kh, ps, rh, rrh, and ζ, η, ω, = āi, ēi, ōi), and not according to the Latin transliteration, the rules for which are as follows ; Greek k=Latin c ; ai=ae ; ou=u ; u (exc. in diphthongs) =y ; ei=i or e ; oi=oe (but in nom. pl.=i) ; g (before g or k)=n ; also, -ōs (nom. masc.), -ōn,=-us, -um ; -ēs, -ē, (1st decl. nom.)=-a ; -ōn (nom.)=-o ; -ōs (genit.)=-is ; -a (accus. sing. masc. or fem.)=-em.

French nouns of Latin origin are with few exceptions derived from the Latin accusative ; but the Latin nominative is here given except when (e. g. in words in -atio) a change of stress is involved.

Greek η (ē) and ω (ō), and the e of Latin infinitives of 2nd conj. (-ēre, -ēri), are regularly marked long. The accented letters (á, ê, &c.) in forms quoted from Old English or other Teutonic languages are long.

F, G, &c., must not be taken to imply that the word to which they are prefixed is current, or is so spelt, in the modern language ; nor does it follow from a word's being given as OF that it is obsolete.

The etymology often contains references in small capitals to words and suffixes.

Hence introduces one or more of the direct derivatives of the word treated ; whence introduces such derivatives under a particular sense to which they are restricted ; so introduces words derived from another language ; hence or cogn., whence or cogn., introduce groups of partly English and partly foreign derivation. The suffixes of such derivatives are commonly printed in small capitals, and are thus referred to the suffix article in its alphabetical place. The numbers enclosed in brackets indicate subdivisions of the suffix article, and are often used to distinguish among the possible senses of the derivative word those in which it is chiefly current.

The first element of a Latin or other compound word is often referred to a prefix article, and the remainder treated separately within brackets ; meanings given within the bracket belong to the simple word, those of the compound being added if necessary outside it. Thus convene is [f. F convenir f. L CON(venire vent- come) assemble, agree, fit]. The stem vent- and the senses agree, fit, are here added for the purposes of convention and convenience, which are referred to convene. The first element of a Greek compound similarly treated is sometimes written according to the current (Latin) transliteration, to facilitate reference to the prefix article ; Greek kakoepeia, under cacoepey, accordingly appears as CACO(epeia). Certain similar devices for saving needless repetition will, it is believed, explain themselves.

The etymology of all words from A to R was drawn in the first instance from the O.E.D., but was occasionally modified after reference to Prof. Skeat's Etymological Dictionary (Clarendon Press, 4th edition, 1910). From S to Z Prof. Skeat's work has been our main authority, the Century and other dictionaries being consulted for the words that he omits. [In the second edition the derivations of all words from S to Z have been examined, and corrected into agreement with the O.E.D. conclusions. This has occasionally required the division of a single article into two or more, or the combining of what we had before treated as separate words into one article.]

REFERENCE BY SMALL CAPITALS

The use of small capitals for etymological purposes is explained above.

In the same way reference is made

(1) from the word treated to another word for the purpose of contrast, distinction, correlation, or the like. Of this kind are the references from slander to libel and scandal, from creationism to evolution and vice versa, and from tenon to mortise and vice versa.

(2) from any member of a group to the word under which the group is collected or further explained. Ruby (print.) is in this way referred to type; order (nat. hist.) to *class*¹; and the *iron*¹, golden, and silver ages to *brazen*¹.

(3) from one or more words of a proverb or the like to that under which alone the proverb is explained. *Play*¹ and *drake*² contain such references to *duck*¹, flesh and herring to *fish*¹. [herring otherwise treated in second edition.]

(4) from a compound of the word treated to its other component for explanation. The sign (=) prefixed to such a reference indicates that the simple word treated is itself used in the sense of the compound. Thus, under *pie*¹, sea-pie is merely referred (SEA-p.) to sea, but maggie, besides being referred to the article maggie, is recorded (=MAGPIE) as one of the senses of pie.

ABBREVIATIONS

In any article, when the word treated in it is to be quoted or mentioned, its initial letter followed by a period is used instead of the whole word; this stands only for the exact form that heads the article; e.g., in the verb love, l. means love (verb or noun), but not loving, loved, &c.; the plural of nouns is represented by doubling the letter; e.g., in extreme, nut, ec., nm., mean extremes, nuts; in the part of an article obviously restricted to a derivative the letter may stand for that derivative; e.g., representation, given in the article represent, is followed by a bracket in which r. stands not for represent, but for representation [in the second edition I have corrected all examples of this possibly ambiguous method that I have noticed, substituting a termination, e.g. -ion for r. in repre- sentation ; but the original warning remains as provision for oversights] ; in the part of an article restricted to a compound, the hyphenated initials of the two parts are used ; e. g., when in doing ground-floor under the article ground the phrase get in on the ground-floor is to be explained in a bracket, g.-f. is used for ground-floor.

Of other abbreviations, a list including all that are not either too obvious to need explanation or generally current (and accordingly to be found in the abbreviation lists given in the first article of each letter of the alphabet) follows on the opposite page. In this list, three points require mention : (1) the appending of &c. means that the abbreviation stands for derivatives or inflexions as well as for the simple word given ; e. g., metaphor &c. means metaphor, metaphorical, or metaphorically ; explain &c. means explain, explains, explained, explaining, or explanation ; this system is used also with abbreviations omitted as obvious ; thus adv. stands not only for adverb, but also for adverbial and adverbially ; (2) abbreviations of nouns, such as ex. (example), prep. (preposition), are often used with the last letter doubled (exx., prepp.) as plurals ; it has not been thought necessary to give these plural forms except in one-letter abbreviations (aa., nn.) ; similar plurals occur for forms that have been omitted as obvious (adjj. for adjectives &c.) ; (3) abbreviations given in the list with initial capital have always the capital in use ; but those given with initial small letter have either form according to circumstances ; similarly, though the list is all in Roman type, the abbreviations are sometimes for reasons not affecting their sense printed in italics.

NOTE ON ACCENT, PRONUNCIATION, INFLEXION, AND FOREIGN WORDS

ACCENT

ACCENT is marked by the turned period (´), which is normally placed after the accented vowel or diphthong (a´ctor, allow´, a´ccent noun, a´ccent verb, exag´geration, exag´gerator); two equal accents in one word are both marked (ti´tibit); and the ´ is used for the secondary as well as for the main accent in long words where the former might be doubtful (circu´mgyra´te, a´biogene´tically).

But the place of the turned period in syllables whose vowel sound is modified by r or re is after the whole combination (por´ter, pure´ly), any possible confusion being guarded against by the — or u (mere´ly, but heré´tical). Similarly it stands after silent consonants (migh´ty, deb´tor, black´guard), consonants that merely modify a vowel sound (cal´mness), or e mute following the accented vowel (blue´bell).

Some miscellaneous examples are added:—fórest, fore´noon, for´tnight, foré´nsic; bar´ring, ba´rrack; bal´my, ba´lsam; arra´ign; demes´ne; sign´ing, sign´ature; high´er; Cadmé´an; de´fray; bye´law; da´ffadowndi´lly; car´nonization.

PRONUNCIATION

When necessary, a bracket is placed immediately after a word, with directions for pronouncing it or some part of it. In these brackets,

(1) Vowel sounds have the value shown by the roman-type letters in:—máte, méte, míte, móte, mûte, möut; räck, rëck, rick, röck, rück, röök; caw, cow; bah, boil.

(2) Vowel-combinations with r (the r is not trilled before a consonant or mute e) are as follows:—

máre, móre, míre, móre, demûre, moor; dowry; part, pert, port.

(3) Italicized vowels or vowel-combinations have the indistinct sound shown in again, moment, admiral, morese, support, certain, connoisseur, comfort, jealous, murder.

(4) Each consonant or consonant-combination has only one sound; the value of ambiguous or specially used ones is:—

ch as in loch; dh as in dhen (=then); g as in get; j as in jet; ng as in singer; ngg as in finger; n-g as in un-gardid (=unguarded); r as in rat (and see vowel-combinations above); s as in sister; th as in thinketh; tsh as in tship (=chip); w as in wit (and see vowel sounds above); y as in yet; zh as in fúchn (=fusion).

Letters marked — or u in the word itself have the same value as in the brackets, except that ö is also used, when there is no danger of confusion, to show that e is not mute or part of a compound sound; so ni-cöty, ca´fféine.

INFLEXION

The rules assumed, exceptions to which are noted in a bracket placed after a word's grammatical description, are as follows:—

1. Verbs add -s in 3rd sing. pres., -ed in past and p.p., -ing in pres. part., -er to form agent-noun.

2. Verbs and adjectives drop final mute e before -ing, -ed, -er, -est.

3. Before -ed, -ing, -er, -est, -eth, monosyllabic verbs and adjectives double a final single consonant (except x) if preceded by a single vowel.

4. (a) nouns, (b) adjectives, (c) verbs, in -y preceded by a consonant have (a) plural -ies, (b) comparative -ier, superlative -iest, adverb -ily, noun -iness, (c) 3rd sing. pres. -ies, past and p.p. -ied, agent-noun -ier.

5. Nouns in -s, -x, -z, -ch=tsh, and -sh, and some in -o, form plural by adding -es; others add -s.

6. Monosyllabic adjectives and disyllables in -y compare in -er, -est; others with more, most.

FOREIGN WORDS

Words usually or often printed in italics as either incompletely naturalized or completely foreign are in sloping type. When either the word itself or any of its sounds is distinctly un-English, the reader is warned by a bracket containing, instead of pronunciation, the letter or letters standing for the language it belongs to. Otherwise, pronunciation is given for sloped words to the same extent as for others, but is often to be taken as merely approximate.

acti'nium, n. Radio-active substance found in pitchblende; an element that turns dark in sunlight. [as prec. + -IUM] a'ction, n., & v.t. Process of acting, exertion of energy or influence, as men of a., put in a., a. of an acid; thing done, act; (in drama) series of events represented; mode of acting, management of body, &c., as a. of a player, horse; mechanism of piano or other instrument; legal process; engagement between troops (A. Front!, Artillery word of command); (v.t.) bring a legal a. against. [F, f. L actionem (as ACT², see -ION)] a'ctionable, a. Affording ground for an action at law. Hence a'ctionably² adv. [ACTION + -ABLE] a'ctive, a. Given to outward action; working, effective; energetic, diligent; acting of one's own accord, acting upon others; (Gram.) the active voice comprises all forms of intransitive verbs, and those forms of transitive verbs that attribute the verbal action to the person or thing whence it proceeds (the logical subject), as We punished him; not, like the forms of the passive voice, to the person or thing to whom it is directed (the logical object), as He was punished by us. Less correctly, verbs are themselves called active. Hence actively² adv. [F (-if, -ive), f. L actīvus (as ACT², see -IVE); or direct f. L in theol. phr. vita activa] a'ctivity, n. Exertion of energy; quality of being active, diligence, nimbleness; (pl.) active forces, spheres of action. [f. F activité f. med. L activitatem (as prec., see -TY)] a'cton, n. Jacket of quilted cotton worn under mail; mail-plated jacket of leather &c. [f. OF auqueton (mod. hoqueton) padding, padded jacket, f. Sp. alcoton (mod. algodon) cotton f. Arab. al-qutun the cotton]

-acy, suf. forming nouns of state or quality from or modelled on L -acia or -atia or Gk -ateia. (1) n. of quality f. L -aci-a f. adj. in -aci-: fall- deceive fallaci- deceitful fallaci-a fallacy. (2) n. of state or quality f. L -ati-a f. nouns in -at (nom. -as, -i- being part of stem or connecting link): med. L primat -primati-a primacy; and by analogy supremacy. (3) n. of state f. med. L -ati-a f. nouns in -atus: advocat -advocat-ia advocacy; and by analogy curacy. This formation was extended to adj. f. L -atus to form accuracy, obstinacy, from accurate, obstinate, where L has nouns in -atio; hence other L words in -atio appear in E with -acy where E has no corresponding adj. in -ate, as conspiracy; similarly, E -acy for L -atus (n. of 4th decl.), as magistratus magistracy, gives rise to episcopacy as if f. E episcopate; and lunacy is formed to match lunatic on anal. of diplomacy diplomatic. (4) n. of state, through L, f. Gk -ateia f. n. in -atēs or vb in -ateuein: peiratēs peirateia piracy.

ad-, pref. (1) f. L ad to, with sense of motion or direction to, change into, addition, adherence, increase, or mere intensification. Before c f g l n p q r s t, and prob. before b, ad was in later L assimilated; before vowels and d h j m v, it was unchanged. In OF, L ad, wherever recognized as such, became a-, even before vowels, as adverber f. L adverberare; but later the spelling was Latinized, sometimes with changed pronunciation, both in F and still more in E, where the OF forms had been adopted. (The use of ad-, ab-, in pairs like adoral, aboral, situated at and away from mouth, is unknown to L.) (2) The pedantic spelling ad- for a- was sometimes extended to a- coming not from L ad- but f. L ab- (advance F avancer L ab-anteare), f. OF en- (addebited OF endetté), f. OF es- f. L ex- (affray OF esfrayer), f. OE a- (accuse ME a-curse), &c.; so admiral f. Arab. amiral. New native compounds with E a- were falsely spelt in the same way.

-ad, suf. of nouns. (1) f. Gk -ad- (nom. -as), in collective numerals (monad, dyad, triad, chiliad, myriad); in fem. patronymics (Dryad, Naiad); in names of poems (Iliad, and by anal. Dunciad, Rosciad); and in family names of plants (Iliad, asclepiad). (2) f. F -ade; see the more usual -ADE.

ādage (-ij), n. Traditional maxim, proverb. [F, f. L adagium (ad to + agi-, root of agio I say)] ate. See EAT.

-ate¹, suf. forming nn. orig. f. L -atus (gen. -ūs) in nouns of state from p.p. stems or nouns, or f. L -atus, -ata, -atum (see -ATE²), which in OF became -é (-ée), but in learned words, and later in many reformed words, -at, as prélat, primat, magistrat. E having adopted -at afterwards added -e to mark quantity of a, and later words took -ate at once. E also formed wds either directly on L as curate or by anal. as aldermanate. Most nn. in -ate are (1) nn. of office, as marquisate, syndicate, (2) participial nn. as legate one deputed, precipitate what is thrown down, (3) chem. terms denoting salts formed by action of an acid on a base, as nitrate, sulphate.

-ate², suf. forming adj. (1) chiefly (thr. F) f. L p.p. in -atus (1st conj.), which (cf. prec.) became successively -at, -ate, as desolate. Many such adj. formed causative vbs (see foll.) and served as p.p. to them, till later the native -ed was added; -ated also appears without intervention of vb, as annulated, and as alternative form to -ate; (2) L participial adj. were also formed on nn., as caudatus tailed, and on adj. as candidatus white-robed; these were largely adopted in E, and others formed on anal. Many nouns in -ATE¹ were orig. adj. In cordate, ovate, &c., the sense is 'shaped like'.

-ate³, suf. forming vbs to correspond to adj. in -ATE², and subsequently to repr. the corr. L vb in -are (p.p. -atus), as separate, aggravate. As these vbs usu. have F equivalents in -er, -ate was further used to form vbs on model of F vbs in -er, as isolate (F isoler). -ate was also used to form vbs that L might have formed, but did not, on nouns, as felicitate (L felicitas -atis), and even vbs on nouns not of L orig., as camporate.

atelier (ät'l-yä'), n. Workshop, studio. [F]

(= -at- of L 1st conj. p.p. stems + -ion) forming abstract nouns on L 1st conj. vbs as agitation, Gk vbs in -izō (L -izare -ize) as organization, F vbs in -er as filtration, and rarely E vbs as starvation, the last on false anal. f. vezation &c., formed on L vezare, not on E vez. The great preponderance of -ation over -ition &c. is due to F adoption of the -er vb (= L 1st conj.) as the type for all new vbs. Wds taken f. OF have often -ison, -son, (orison, reason) instead of -ation. Most wds have vb in -ate corr. (creation), many a shortened vb f. L 1st conj. (plantation, plant, not plantate; modify, not modificate), a few no vb (duration). Meanings: (1) vbl action; (2) instance of this; (3) resulting state; (4) concrete result (plantation).

-ative, adj. suf. = -at- + -ive (cf. -ATIC); most exx. are f. vbs in -ate as demonstrative, or L 1st conj. as affirmative, some f. nouns in -iv (L st. -lat-) as authoritative, and some on E vbs as talkative.

Atlantic, a. & n. Pertaining to mount Atlas in Libya; hence applied to sea near western shore of Africa, and later to whole ocean between Europe and Africa on east and America on west; (n.) Atlantic ocean. [f. L f. Gk Atlantikos f. foll.]
